HISTORICAL/BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION

First established as the Laffite Study Group in 1975, this non-profit organization grew out of the correspondence of interested historians Jane Lucas DeGrummond, John L. Howells, Sue Thompson and Robert C. Vogel. They planned to publish a series of occasional papers focused on pirates/privateers Jean and Pierre Laffite's role in American history, folklore and literature.

The first installment, The Life and Times of Jean Laffite, was published in 1976 with more to follow in succeeding years. Additional publications were added until 1990. The membership, essentially the mailing list for the publications, had grown into an international group. After a few years of inactivity, a new organization grew out of the old. In 1994, The Laffite Society of Galveston formed a board and continued to collect and compile information about the Laffite brothers, Jean and Pierre, their descendants and contemporaries which they publish in the Laffite Society Chronicles.

Jean Laffite (ca.1776-ca.1823) and his older brother Pierre Laffite were French pirates and privateers in the Gulf of Mexico in the early 19th century. Though historical characters, the facts of their lives were surrounded by myth and legend. Few facts about their birth or arrival in the New World are absolute. "By the fall of 1809 the Laffites had a modest smuggling operation well founded, matching buyers with well-established slave importers. Jean took buyers to Grand Terre to make the sales, while Pierre stayed in New Orleans to handle the Laffites' business affairs there. (Davis, The Pirates Laffite, p.51) Jean Laffite proved himself a shrewd patriot during the War of 1812 by helping Andrew Jackson and the United States in the Battle of New Orleans against the British while bargaining for a presidential pardon. Nevertheless, when their criminal activities made them unwelcome in Louisiana, the Laffites moved their operations in 1817 to Galveston, Texas, which they called Campeche. The Spanish government accepted their presence on Galveston Island because they spied for the Spaniards. Meanwhile, the Laffites continued their involvement in smuggling and the slave trade. By 1820, as a result of the Adams-Onis Treaty with Spanish Mexico, the United States "stepped up naval activities aimed at pirates and smugglers in the northern Gulf of Mexico." [Robert C. Vogel] The Navy agreed to let the Laffites gather their belongings and leave peaceably, which they did on May 7, 1820.
